

Bedtime Story For the Little Ones

UNCLE WIGGLY AND THE DANDELIONS.

BY HOWARD R. GARIN.

"O H, UNCLE WIGGLY, you're coming, aren't you?" cried Susie Littlebit, the rabbit girl, as she hopped up the front porch of the bunny gentleman's hollow stump hangar on a morning.

"Coming where, Susie?" asked Mr. Longears.

"To my party," answered Susie. "Here's an invitation all written out for you on a white lettuce leaf, and when you've finished reading it you may eat it. Then you'll be sure to remember to come."

"Oh, I'd be sure to remember to come to your party, anyhow, Susie," said Uncle Wiggly with a laugh. "At the same time I'm much obliged to you for asking me."

"And, to make sure he would not forget to remember, the bunny gentleman did eat the lettuce."

"I'll be ready with peppermint and popcorn in case the children eat too many sweetest macaroni rolls," laughed Dr. Pussant.

"Why, Susie? What is the matter?" asked the bunny.

"Worse than that," answered Susie. "The Cricket and Katy did not eat head can't come to my party, and what is a party without music, I'd like to know."

"What music?" asked Uncle Wiggly. "Then he thought for a minute, and said:

"Now, Susie, don't you fret. You are right, and the other parts of your party, and when it comes time for the music, we'll be here."

"You will it, really?" asked Wiggly. "I'll be here, I'll be here, I'll be here," cried the little rabbit girl, clapping her paws in delight.

"Then when Susie hurried off to welcome the party guests Uncle Wiggly said something to Grandpa Goosey and they hurried off to the dance.

"They were gone for some time, and Susie was getting anxious about the music when all of a sudden it started.

"Toot! Toot! Tootle-toot-toot!" went a lot of horns, and they played the most dancing tune you can imagine, so that no one's feet or paws could keep still, but every one had to wiggle.

"What lovely music!" they all cried. "Who is making it, Susie?"

"Uncle Wiggly," answered the little rabbit girl, and so the bunny uncle was, with the help of Grandpa Goosey. They had picked a lot of the big, long, hollow dandelion stems, making them of different lengths, and when they blew on them, one after another, it sounded just like tooting horns, and made beautiful tunes.

"Susie had music for her party after all, you see, and there was a most delightful time. And if the cricket and Katy's feet were not so big, they could have danced with the music."

Abcess Teeth

Shooting how pass from an abcess tooth gets to the blood stream, causing the numerous blood diseases, rheumatism, etc., etc. Medicine decays the fall of your familiar "corner dentist."

You don't see him any more in the big city—simply because of the discovery of what this dead tooth can do to the body. It is more dangerous than all diseases put together.

The famous Dr. Oiler, in answer to the question, "What is more dangerous than whisky?" answered "The Dead Tooth."

"This tooth is now promptly extracted by your Medical Specialist—your dentist then replaces it."

Dr. Williams can offer you the services of both the M. D. and D. D. S. degrees, representing seven years study upon the teeth and surrounding organs and tissues. He is an expert in extracting. No dentist in any large city does his own extracting. It is cheaper, safer, quicker and with less pain to have an experienced specialist do it. The charges are the same as your regular dentists—either upper or lower. Absolutely painless, of course.

What's in Your Baby's Bottle?

You have nursed your baby just as long as you can. Now your milk is no longer enough for that fast-growing body. You must give him something else. Something in a bottle that will take the place of mother's milk.

You know that your baby must have milk in some form, but milk so like your own that baby will find no difference. If you put raw cow's milk in the bottle you are making that little baby struggle with the stiff curd intended for the four stomachs of a calf. You are perhaps making that trail body fight the germs of summer complaint and typhoid.

Yet cows' milk must be the basis for baby's food. Give him

BEAUTY CHATS.

By Edna Kent Furber.

The Best Bleach.

THE best bleach is lemon juice. Incidentally, it's about the cheapest and these days when you must economize, that's an item in its favor. An lemon is always handy, and it cannot hurt the skin, so a piece of lemon is the best bleach for the skin.

There are a number of ways to make lemon bleaches, however. One can rub a piece of lemon over the skin, and let it dry in a moment, but this often stings, and cannot be left on long. Or, the lemon juice can be squeezed and strained through a cloth, and mixed with equal parts of glycerine and rose water, and shaken to form a bleach that also softens the skin. Or, the lemon can simply be diluted with water and used, or mixed with perfume or pure alcohol.

Personally, I prefer to have my complexion as simple and natural as possible. That is, I would prefer a bleach made from pure fruit or vegetable acids to one containing a number of strange ingredients. I have found cucumber juice to be an invaluable summer toilet remedy, prepared in any one of a dozen ways. Buttermilk is a bleach, too, and softens it, makes the skin wonderfully creamy. Any of these three will get upon freckles in a greater or less degree, but freckles appear in new places again, as soon as one gets out into the sun.

Lemon is splendid for removing fruit and vegetable stains from the fingers, and for getting in under the nails, and taking out the stubborn stains that will get under there, and spoil the appearance of the fingers. And it will whiten the skin of the neck when it gets brown from a combination of sunburn and rubbing of the collar.

Questions and Answers.

Q.—Read the above chat, as an answer to your letter.

A.—Read your skin with cold cream before you start on the bleaching, and powder it well. Carry a little box of powder with you, and rub the face from time to time. When you come back, rub with a bleaching cream before washing with water, and you won't get sunburned.

A. S. Hine—I do not know how to keep hair in line.

Q.—You need more time in your bath, that is the reason for the very soft hair. Try drinking a few glasses of water every day, to which you have added a tablespoonful of lime water—one to each glass.

Jacel Cynthia Cline—Agar is a fishy, tasteless stuff, which comes by the name in every good drug store. You mix a teaspoonful with your food every day, and eat it. It isn't a medicine, it doesn't digest, but forms a mass in the stomach, which passes through the bowels and cleans out all

THE DAILY NOVELLETTE

THE PINNACLE OF LOVE.

(Translated from the Turkish.)

ONE evening after an afternoon in the dunes (shouting aloft), Falcón the Wise returned home with a lovely basket of quinine berries.

At once his three beautiful wives, Fatma, Fatma and Ghosh, set up a nervous racking clamor as to which one was entitled to receive the gift.

And Fatma the Wise removed his fingers from his ears and spoke:

"I have a gift for you, my dear, but it is a gift of quinine berries, and you must eat them all."

"But, my dear, I have no more berries," cried Fatma, and she turned to her two sisters, and said: "I have a gift for you, my dear, but it is a gift of quinine berries, and you must eat them all."

"But, my dear, I have no more berries," cried Fatma, and she turned to her two sisters, and said: "I have a gift for you, my dear, but it is a gift of quinine berries, and you must eat them all."
